TRINITY MARKET

Trinity Market was Hull's second market hall, principally for fruit, flowers, and vegetables. It opened in 1904, and by 1928 it contained 74 stalls. In 1941 the first of these halls was destroyed by bombing, and stallholders from it were accommodated in the North Church Side hall. Trinity Market hall was then further extended in 1950 and 1958, and by 1962 it contained 98 stalls.

The recent refurbishment of Trinity Indoor Market is central to the wider project of re-purposing the Old Town, delivering a vision where the city's medieval heart is brimming with vibrant pubs, cafés and bars around a re-energised Trinity Square.

Facilities have been upgraded and the redesigned ceiling now allows light to flood over the railway style arches and down onto the stalls. These improvements make the market a much more appealing and inviting shopping atmosphere that complements the adjoining Victorian Hepworth Arcade.

The reinvention of the food offer has created a hub of contemporary street food, generating footfall alongside the traditional traders. Amazing food from around the world - Greek, Indian, Chinese, Italian - Trinity Market has it all. Enjoy something tasty for lunch from one of the delis, a treat to take home, or stock up with the groceries.
